An Attitude of Gratitude (a devotional)

As we recently celebrated Thanksgiving, let's talk about the importance of being grateful. Gratitude goes beyond an appreciation for life and the many blessings we have. Gratitude has the power to heal us from the inside out.

Much research has been done on this topic and the findings are astonishing! By consistently practicing gratitude, we have the ability to change our brains. By simply being thankful, we can reduce symptoms of depression, alleviate anxiety, and relieve stress.

Gratitude has also been shown to improve relationships, increase resilience, and improve overall health and well-being. These are just a few of the ways a regular gratitude practice can impact our lives. You may be wondering why gratitude is so powerful. It's partly because of how incredibly powerful the mind is. Our minds shape our reality. What we focus on is what we tend to gravitate toward. If our thoughts are constantly in loops of complaining, comparing ourselves, or frustrated with where we are and what we have, then we will likely find ourselves feeling miserable and unhappy.

The opposite is true as well. When we focus on positive things, over time, we begin to feel healthier and happier. If you're feeling stuck in a rut right now, don't worry — you're not alone, and gratitude is the antidote.

Now that we better understand the remarkable benefits of gratitude, let's explore why it's essential to practice gratitude in the ordinary moments of our lives. You may find yourself wondering how to find things to be thankful for when every day seems routine, boring, and insignificant. The amazing thing about gratitude is that it can transform the mundane into the extraordinary. It invites us to look around and notice the blessings tucked into these everyday moments.

Consider the simple pleasures that surround you each day. The sunrise painting the sky, the breath that fills your lungs, the cool air against your skin, or the comforting warmth a cup of coffee brings.

Gratitude ushers us into the here and now, reminding us that every moment is full of purpose and meaning. God is in every one of them. That alone is something to be thankful for.

Gratitude isn't meant to be a one-and-done thing. Consistency is key when it comes to experiencing the positive results that follow a regular practice of gratitude. The Bible reminds us of the importance of this continuous habit. In 1 Thessalonians 5:18, Paul says, "Be thankful in all circumstances, for this is God's will for you who belong to Christ Jesus." This verse reminds us that regardless of what we're facing, there is always something to be thankful for. The word "always" here speaks to the importance of consistently practicing gratitude. For us to be consistent with this habit, we'll need to create simple rhythms that fit into our everyday lives.

Here are three simple ways to make gratitude a daily practice:

- Morning practice: Begin your day with a moment of reflection. Yes, it's that simple! Before you get out of bed, think about one thing you're grateful for.
- Coffee and thanksgiving: Another way to jumpstart your day with gratitude is to reflect for a moment as you drink your morning cup of coffee or hot tea.
- Nightly reflection: Before going to bed, reflect on your day and identify one thing you're thankful for. This allows you to end the day on a positive note.

However, you choose to incorporate gratitude, remember that even a brief pause has a significant impact. By anchoring gratitude to your daily routine, you will find that it becomes a natural part of your daily life.

Embracing gratitude as a daily practice allows us to discover that the ordinary is, in fact, extraordinary. Every moment is a gift, and with a grateful heart, you can savor the beauty and wonder of each day.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

President: Patti Hime | info@rbrepublicanwomen.org

Rancho Bernardo Republican Women –

It has been my honor to lead such an amazing group of Patriot ladies for these past two years. Our club has changed so much. The biggest change was becoming an independent organization. We untethered ourselves from a state and national organization, allowing us the freedom to more closely meet the needs of our members and local candidates. The transition was seamless thanks to our incredibly strong Board of Directors. Thank you to all of the membership who supported our club during this time.

I think we can all agree that our Programs Chairwomen did an excellent job ensuring that every single meeting had relevant and engaging speakers, as well as providing members with so many opportunities to hear from candidates. Our Membership Chairwomen were always busy signing up new members, hosting new member socials, and renewing the entire membership each year. Our Ways and Means Chairwomen exceeded their "fun"draising goals and hosted several fun social events, such as Bingo, Bunco and Fashion Shows. We had smooth check ins and hostesses making sure everyone had a seat. We had beautiful prayers and devotions before each meeting. Our events are advertised in the local newspapers. Our Legislative Chairwoman kept us informed of upcoming legislation. We participated in several community events in Poway and Rancho Bernardo. Our newsletter is published each month. Events get created in Eventbrite and reminder emails are sent to members.

It truly takes a village to run this organization. Our luncheons are so fun and well-attended due to the hard work behind the scenes of each and every member of the Board of Directors and Standing Committee chairpersons. My job was so easy thanks to the Board and I thank them all. The incoming Board will be just as amazing, and The Best is Yet to Come! See you at Bingo in December!

Patti

We wish our new RBRW President, Judy Simeroth, all the best as she leads us through this crucially important presidential election year. And to the out-going President, Patti Hime, much thanks and gratitude to you for a job well done.

FAIR Take | November 2023

LaJoyce Robinson, VP of Political Action

Migrant caravans could be making a comeback. On October 30, a caravan of migrants set out from Tapachula, a city in the far south of Mexico that borders Guatemala. The caravan grew as it pushed north and local officials estimate it consists of approximately 3,500 illegal migrants, while the caravan organizers themselves claim to be leading 7,000 people.

At one point, the caravan blocked a major highway in southern Mexico and the migrants demanded that the Mexican authorities issue them with transit visas so they could continue northward and attempt to enter the U.S. One of the caravan's organizers said the blockade would continue, because migrants are afraid of the criminals who will prey on them if they keep walking. Many would prefer to take buses, but are often prevented from doing so if they don't have papers. But Mexico's Refugee Aid Commission issued a statement late Tuesday stating it does not issue transit visas.

Illegal migrant caravans heading towards the U.S. Southwest border were a problem faced by the Trump administration, especially at their peak in 2018. These caravans were far from a spontaneous affair, and some were organized and coordinated by the pro-mass-migration nongovernmental organization, Pueblo Sin Fronteras ("People Without Borders"). The role of NGOs in this and other caravans poses an extra challenge to America's border security, which is already badly strained by the 8 million encounters since January 2021.

One interesting feature of the caravan currently traversing Mexico is the presence of Cuban, Haitian and Venezuelan nationals. The Biden administration's parole program was specifically designed to help Cubans, Haitians, Nicaraguans, and Venezuelans by allowing them to fly into the United States. Biden administration officials claimed it would "lawfully and safely bring qualifying individuals into the United States." However, the participation of Cubans, Haitians, and Venezuelans in this caravan shows that the parole policy is a failure, and may even be encouraging illegal immigration from those countries.

The U.S. immigration system has been susceptible to abuse long before President Biden assumed office. But policies pursued by the current administration, such as parole and scrapping the Migrant Protection Protocols (often referred to as "Remain in Mexico"), have helped increase mass illegal immigration. The organizers of and participants in the new caravan are aware of policy changes that increase their chance of entry. Reuters spoke with a Venezuelan migrant who said: "the group was impatient to get to the U.S. border and start the process to enter the U.S. with appointments secured via a U.S. government app, CBP One, and request asylum."

The Associated Press also spoke with a Honduran in the caravan who admitted his motives were economic: "The idea is to get to the United States because there is a better future for the children, the truth is that we are doing it for them." While understandable, such sentiments neglect the fact that mass, unchecked illegal migration often exerts negative impact on American children – including those of legal immigrants – for example by funneling public education resources away from them towards the expensive-to-educate children of migrants, most of whom require Limited English Proficiency coursework.

At this point, the new migrant caravan remains in southern Mexico. If the caravan manages to reach the U.S. border, for example, if Mexico changes its attitude and decides to allow it to pass, it is likely that U.S. border officials will simply release the migrants after processing, and that is probably what the migrants within the caravan are hoping. Regardless of how events unfold, FAIR will continue monitoring the situation and informing the American public about the true extent and impact of the illegal migration crisis.

Foundation for Women Warriors

Thank you to our very generous members!

At our November 17th meeting, we collected donations for the Foundation for Women Warriors. These donations were delivered later that afternoon to the Foundation Headquarters office and warehouse in Vista. Many members brought a gift or provided cash and gift cards. Some members elected to purchase items off the Amazon website and had their donation sent directly to the Foundation. Some of the gifts donated at the meeting were: toys, coloring books and crayons, diapers and a beautiful hand made quilt. The cash, gift cards and checks totaled $410.00.

Keisha Jarvis-Jones was at the warehouse and graciously accepted the gifts. She thanked our organization for its support. Keisha said they have a few events where they can use some volunteers. Sometimes they have a baby shower for an expectant mother, who has few resources. They have clothing events where the Foundation collects clothing, either purchased or donated and women come in and obtain professional clothing for civilian jobs. In 2024, she will advise us of events where they can use our help. Below are the websites for the Foundation and Amazon site where donation items can be ordered and sent directly to their warehouse.

AMERICANISM

Submitted by Dian Higginbotham

The Meaning of Thanksgiving Can Save America We're fighting for the soul of our nation

By Edward Ring

November 21, 2023

<https://amgreatness.com/2023/11/21/the-meaning-of-thanksgiving-can-save-america/>

Thanksgiving, according to Britannica.com, “has come to symbolize intercultural peace, America’s opportunity for newcomers, and the sanctity of home and family.” This definition captures the ideals, more relevant than ever, of one of America’s favorite holidays. But these ideals are threatened, because America’s mainstream institutions have either rejected them, or have created an environment where they are no longer possible.

This is immediately obvious with the “woke” doctrine of race-based oppressor and oppressed, now promoted by academia, the media, entertainers, politicians, and corporations. Maybe the fellowship of the Pilgrims and the Wampanoag Indians is mostly fable, cruelly debunked by history

Or maybe, fable or not, it is an inspiring message of unity for a nation of settlers and immigrants who have created a place where everyone, including descendants of the Indians, have enjoyed more freedom and opportunity than anywhere else in the history of the world. That’s a debate we have to wage, and one we cannot lose. Like all nations and tribes, America has had dark moments. But the good overwhelms the bad. It’s not even close.

The attempted destruction of America’s self-confidence and unity by its own institutions, however, which must be challenged and overcome, must not distract from an even bigger problem. America’s institutions have also launched a propaganda campaign, growing in intensity every year, that claims we face an existential climate crisis, and massive sacrifices are necessary to cope. This is a lie.

It’s particularly relevant to reflect on this fraud during Thanksgiving, because our nation of settlers and immigrants would not exist if the types of rules and restrictions being imposed on Americans today were in effect 400 years ago. And it gives rise to a fundamental conflict: We continue to invite immigrants from around the world to move here, but thanks to extreme environmentalist restrictions, we are unable to build the necessary infrastructure to support them.

This violates the second essential value of Thanksgiving as defined by Britannica.com, the celebration of how America provides opportunity for newcomers. That opportunity has been hijacked and destroyed by corporate special interests, hiding behind woke ideologues and environmentalists. The woke say let them come, and they’re coming these days by the millions. Then the environmentalists say we have to lower our “footprint,” hence we can’t make room for the newcomers. Environmentalist restrictions have made it nearly impossible to expand existing cities or build new cities.

The consequences of this are a dismal diminishing of quality of life for immigrants as well as for the people already here. Migrants are arriving by the tens of thousands to New York City, where the average apartment rents for over $5,000 per month. On the opposite coast, in sprawling Los Angeles, the average rent is nearly $3,000 per month for an 800 square foot apartment.

This engineered shortage of housing, resulting in demand driven prices rising to unaffordable levels, is unprecedented. It is caused by a perfect storm of public corruption and corporate greed exploiting the primal fear of “global boiling” to silence dissent. This breeds intercultural disharmony, as aspiring low income communities including massive waves of immigrants are denied amenities enjoyed by all who purchased homes before the storm hit the shore.

The climate scam is simple, but it is a betrayal of everything that made America a great and welcoming place. Instead of using public money to build roads and enabling infrastructure to encourage more home construction, increase pay and benefits for public employees, and hire more public employees to dole out welfare to the people who can’t afford homes. Instead of competing to provide homes at affordable prices, developers collect subsidies to build “affordable housing.” It’s all to save the planet, and the scam translates into every industry, and elevates the cost for every one of life’s essentials.

- continued on page 13

Which brings us to the sanctity of home and family. It's difficult to imagine how America's institutions could be more committed to destroying home and family. It is financially impossible for most young couples to afford a home close to their jobs. The average home in New York City is $733,000, in Los Angeles it's $926,000. Try to pay that monthly mortgage, while also covering property taxes and insurance, along with utilities and maintenance. And if mom works? Expect to pay \$20,000 per year, per child, for childcare, at the same time as mom's income pops you into a higher tax bracket. The cards are stacked.

Economic war against the family is only part of the problem, however, the moral assault on home and family is much worse. American women are trained to reject motherhood. Apart from traditional churches, every cultural influence in America tells women it's not worth it. From the Atlantic, "having children is terrible for quality of life." Fortune writes "millennials break from tradition and embrace being child-free." Time, "Having It All Without Having Children." And as for Christianity? "It 'prevents women from being free from male oppression.'"

No children. No Christianity. But if you buck the trend and have children? What does American society teach these children about home and family? These two articles from America's "newspaper of record," the New York Times, provides an indication. "Let's Quit Fetishizing the Single-Family Home," and "The Nuclear Family Is No Longer the Norm." Good." No home with a yard and a garden. No mom and dad. Despite overwhelming evidence that people prefer detached homes and children of two parent households do better in life. According to America's mainstream institutions, those things are bad.

Make a single family home unaffordable, and stigmatize it as an environmental abomination. Cordon off the cities and stack everyone together via infill and densification. And just in case the rising generation still wants to have a traditional family, marinate them in climate terror so they'll join the Voluntary Human Extinction Movement, or neuter them with transgender affirmation.

Such is the betrayal of America by what were once our trusted institutions. Everything that Thanksgiving represents – cultural harmony, opportunity, and family – is under attack. It must be stopped. Not slowed down. Stopped cold, eradicated, and replaced with the traditions and values that built this country.

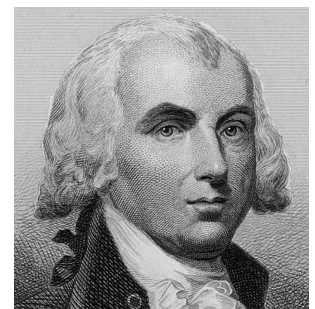

For Americans who still embrace the Thanksgiving holiday for all of its historic promise, it can remind us that unity is still possible, that opportunities in this nation can still be available to everyone, and that more than anything else, our homes and our families are the cherished foundation of our health and happiness. When we fight the nihilistic Left and their opportunistic corporate enablers, we must never forget what tremendous upside our American traditions provide, or the joy and optimism and sense of possibility that has always defined our people.

This is a fight for the soul of the nation. There is no reason why the spirit of Thanksgiving cannot inform a resurgent America, and endure for another 400 years and beyond.

AMERICA:

The greatest country in the world.
