PRAY FOR OUR NATION

Julie Carlson | Chaplain

Father God,

As citizens of this great nation, help us to recommit ourselves to the principles upon which it was founded, principles rooted in the truths of God's Word. As we turn our hearts towards You in prayer and seek Your face, we invite Your presence to transform our lives and our land.

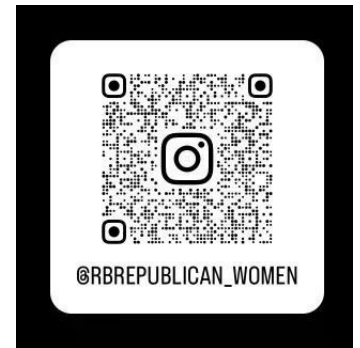

In these uncertain times, we thank You that You are unchanging, and the anchor that holds us steady amidst the storms. As we humbly seek Your face and turn from our self-centered ways, we can trust in Your promise to heal our land and lead us on a path toward restoration and renewal.

In Your Name,

Amen

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Connie Munoz | President | info@rbrepublicanwomen.org

CALIFORNIA VOTING INSTRUCTIONS, Voter Bill of Rights YOU HAVE THE FOLLOWING RIGHTS:

You have a right to vote if you are a registered voter.

(U.S. citizen living in CA, but whose checking!?! , 18 years old, not in state or federal prison for a felony, and currently mentally incompetent! Well, that's all reassuring!)

Right to vote if you are a registered voter even if your name is not on the list.

Otherwise, you are put on the provisional list to vote. You may not have voted recently or other reasons, so check out why.

The right to vote if you are still in line when the polls close.

Let's hope that doesn't happen because people have been denied voting during various closures. Polls are open regionally for 11 days, with more locations open the last 4 days. If waiting that late, it's better to vote over the weekend instead of Election Day to make sure it is counted. Some Arizona districts ran out of ink or had the wrong type of paper so sent voters to other locations. Kari Lake maybe "lost" the election when people ran out of patience and went home. So vote early.

The right to cast a secret ballot without anyone bothering you or telling you how to vote.

The right to get a new ballot if you have made a mistake.

You can: Ask in person at polling place, exchange a ballot at elections office or polling place, vote using a Provisional ballot. Provisional ballots are set aside and take more time to be processed by hand. Election workers can tamper with them when they "remake" the selections, so avoid that kind of ballot at all costs! Also, coffee stains, tears, comments/confusing marks anywhere outside the box can cause you to have a provisional ballot. Avoid if possible!

The right to get help casting your ballot.

The right to drop off your completed vote-by-mail ballot at any polling place in CA.

That's pretty convenient,, but you wonder if it tallies quickly in your local voting area. The best way is to vote in a polling location or at the Registrar of Voters. Drop it off, or take it inside, remove it from the envelope and vote a "Naked Ballot" which turns in your filled out ballot directly, avoiding several other steps. Avoid using a machine which is simply a printer connected to a computer! You can't be assured of what happens afterwards!

The right to get election materials in a language other than English "if enough people in your voting precinct speak that language".

If you live in America, shouldn't you try to speak our language? And shouldn't official business be conducted in English?

- Continued from page 3

The right to ask questions to elections officials about election procedures and watch the election process.

Ask some of our members who have monitored elections and they will say that not all voting officials know the correct procedures when questioned.

The right to report any illegal or fraudulent election activity.

We can only hope they will listen...

A suggestion is to come to the May 15th luncheon speakers before you vote. Lisa Hazelton (Unite4Freedom) has analyzed federal elections in over 30 states.

Also, Jan Stewart, our Political Activities Chairwoman can take your ballot to the ROV.

One can always go to the ROV to vote and watch through the glass at each station to see how the process works. The address is 5600 Overland Avenue, San Diego, 92123. Disabled people can pull up to the entrance of a polling location or ROV and vote on a machine brought out to their car, if requested. This happens on a machine so is not recommended. Better to mail in your ballot.

In conclusion, do we really need to have such guidelines explained to us Californians, when common sense tells us we already know the answer? Every citizen should know how to conduct themselves about our elections. All we want are fair elections, not to fear that they are rigged, over or miss-counted, people voting multiple times, polls closing early, faulty voting machines used, devious officials monitoring the machines, votes not being counted on the day of the election for a final tally,... I could mention many more alarming reasons to not trust our elections. Not only here in California, but in many other states, as well.

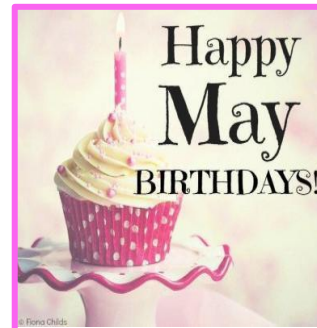

Ballots are on their way! So, LET'S GET OUT THE VOTE!

Connie

WAYS & MEANS

Jenny Cole and Anesh Speck | Co-Chairs

Thank you for supporting all our monthly themed Colony baskets, holiday themed baskets, and “Share the Purse” drawings.

May’s highlighted state colony is Connecticut. It’s called the “Constitution state.” The name is derived from the Native American Mohegan Quinnehtukqut, meaning “besides the long, tidal river.” The state is known as the “invention factory” having developed the Submarine, the nuclear Submarine, the frisbee, the wiffle ball, the first subway system called the “Bee Line” in 1875, silly putty, a first ever printed telephone directory in 1878, and the Polaroid camera. Fun fact: Yale University threw pie tins which were the precursor to the modern “frisbee.” Foodwise, it’s known for its buttered lobster rolls and the invention of the hamburger in 1900. It has the oldest operational amusement park which opened in 1846.

For our Dads, we’re going to have a special Father’s Day themed basket. Remember to bring cash for our fabulous fundraiser items! We will celebrate the May birthdays and will have a drawing for a beautiful plant.

AMERICANISM

Julie Carlson | Americanism Chair

American Exceptionalism

The phrase American Exceptionalism is often mentioned casually to describe this revolutionary idea and the grand experiment in self-government that followed. As we celebrate the 250th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, it's important for all Americans to probe deeper into that concept.

What, precisely, makes America exceptional? What distinguishes it not only in rhetoric, but in structure, endurance, and consequence?

American Exceptionalism did not spring from myth or improvisation. It emerged from a particular people shaped by institutions and experiences – namely those of Christian Europe, and England in particular. The American founding and revolutionary spirit grew from the soil of English common law, the legacy of Magna Carta, and the constitutional struggles of the 17th century.

Equally important was the moral framework within which these political ideas operated. The society that produced the American Revolution was overwhelmingly shaped by Christian belief. Local churches structured community life, and the language of covenant, sin, and moral accountability permeated public discourse. The Great Awakening reinforced the idea that individuals stood equal before God and were personally responsible for their conduct. That moral formation mattered because republican government presumes restraint. It assumed that citizens can govern themselves before they presume to govern others. As John Adams wrote, "Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."

To describe America as exceptional is not to claim moral perfection. America is exceptional because it was established by a people shaped by Christian moral assumptions. It was this framework that produced a political order capable of sustaining liberty on a scale history had never seen before.

If the Declaration articulated America's founding principles, the Constitution secured them. Signed in 1787 and ratified the following year, it remains the oldest written national constitution still in force. It is also one of the shortest governing charters in the world. In just a few thousand words, the US Constitution established a structure durable enough to survive civil war, economic depression, world conflict, and dramatic social change – amended when necessary but never replaced.

The framers were students of history. They understood that republics often collapse into factionalism or dictatorship. Their solution was not to rely on virtue alone, but instead, they designed a structure that restrained power by dividing it.

James Madison wrote in Federalist No. 51: "if men were angels, no government would be necessary." In other words, since men are not angels, power must be checked by power. Congress was divided into two chambers, each elected differently and given substantial authority. The president would be independently elected, armed with a veto, and not dependent on the legislature for his tenure. The judiciary would stand apart, insulated from political retaliation. Authority would be divided between federal and state governments.

No honest account of American Exceptionalism can ignore the central contradiction of the early republic. Slavery, present in the colonies long before independence, endured into the life of the new nation.

By 1861 sectional tensions had hardened into secession and war. More than 600,000 Americans died in four years of brutal combat – a devastating toll in a nation of roughly 31 million people.

Few republics survive civil war or emerge with their constitutional framework intact. The United States did both. The Union was preserved, slavery was abolished, and the Constitution was amended rather than abandoned. The Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments expanded the meaning of citizenship and liberty within the existing constitutional order. The framework of the nation proved strong enough to survive its greatest trial and to correct itself without collapsing into permanent despotism or fragmentation. This alone makes America exceptional among the nations of the world.

In the 20th century the United States moved from continental power to global actor. Twice in a generation, it crossed oceans to confront totalitarian regimes. In World War II, American industry and manpower helped defeat fascism. After the war, the U.S. financed European reconstruction through the Marshall Plan, helped stabilize currencies under the Bretton Woods system, and anchored a global order that encouraged trade and cooperation.

The Cold War that followed was not only a military contest but a test of systems. The United States contained and ultimately outlasted Soviet communism, demonstrating that free societies generate prosperity and innovation. The U.S. emerged from this test of wills stronger than before and created the highest standard of living in world history, landed a man on the moon, revolutionized medicine, invented the internet, and built the future.

The Constitution still governs a nation of more than 330 million people. Its structure continues to channel political conflict into lawful processes rather than coups or purges.

When Lincoln called the United States “the last best hope of earth” – a phrase echoed by Ronald Reagan, he wasn’t saying that America was flawless. He was asserting that constitutional self-government on this scale is rare – exceptional – in the history of nations.

Today, 250 years after 1776, the question is not whether America has been perfect. No nation is. The question is whether we understand the great blessings that we have inherited, and whether we possess the moral fiber and civic stamina required to preserve them.
